With a Focus on design and creativity Allecera provides captivating designs that integrate Italian style into exciting and imaginative environments. An experienced in-house design team, along with a highly-efficient sales team, help service large-scale distributors and specialized dealers, as well as designers, architects and commercial clients. With more visually daring products and expanded product collections, partnerships were formed with top architects and designers.

Independent dealers know more about their customers' needs than Caterpillar ever could.

Our Business Associates can be much more than a channel to customers. They can play an important role in providing customers with a wide range of services before and after the sale. Those services include advice on the selection and application of a product.

The quality of the relationship between a company and its dealers is much more important than the contractual agreements or the techniques and tactics that make the relationship work on the surface. What matters is mutual trust, and that is fostered by observing a few simple rules: Share gain as well as pain; strive for continuity in relationships and consistency in policies; and communicate constantly. For a company that relies on independent dealers to present one face to its customers around the world, it must have uniform practices and performance standards for dealers and treat them all with equal consideration while recognizing that they are independent and unique in many ways.
